CURRENT COMMENT.

A Farmer's Advice.

An Addison county farmer writes The News as follows: "There is nothing gained by planting small potatoes. We fear that the practice of selecting the seed of the stock that is not salable is too generally the case, and the result is that the quality of our potatoes is not being maintained." This is excellent advice. The profitable results which have followed the selection of the best seed for planting in particular cases, demonstrate the absolute wisdom of paying attention to the procurement of the best seed obtainable for every crop which Vermont farmers grow. The fundamental operation in farming is the selection of seed. "Well begun is half done."—Rutland News.

Entitled to a Hearing.

It is a matter of regret if the Legislature cannot find time to give consideration to the petition of the real estate interests of Boston for an amendment to the present law relating to contractors' liens. Because of the present defective law, construction loans are said to be practically unobtainable at the present time. Real estate operations and building are badly handicapped by the situation. The real estate men present a reasonable request and have a legitimate argument of fact in support of it. Reference to the next General Court, which has been voted by a majority of the judiciary committee, is not an answer to their petition to which the interests involved are entitled. Real estate development in this city and in every other city in the state, is entitled to a fair hearing before the legislature.—Boston Herald.

Senator Stewart.

Those who know Senator Stewart realize that it would have been an exceedingly difficult matter for Governor Proctor to find a man who would better fit into the situation than does Senator Stewart. His long experience in connection with Vermont's public affairs as State legislator, speaker of the House, and over active citizen, was supplemented by a term of eight years in the National House of Representatives during which time he formed a wide acquaintance among the public men of the nation and showed the possession of marked ability as legislator, student of public affairs and statesman. This knowledge of "the ropes" in Congress and acquaintance with many of the leading men of our country, gave Senator Stewart the ability to step into the senate ready equipped for active and efficient service. He knows the needs of our state and the preference of our people. He has kept in intimate touch with public affairs and few men who have not been in recent service in one branch of Congress or the other are better posted than he is as to our country's public men and measures. Senator Stewart is a man of sound judgment, as well as of pronounced convictions, and he will help to maintain the prestige won for Vermont in the United States Senate by a long list of distinguished Senators.—Burlington Free Press.

A Doughnut With a Hole.

The News made an attempt the other day to show that business had greatly improved since the war. It gave many instances of the increased employment of labor and the general upward tendency.

At the close of this generally optimistic article, the reporter who gathered the facts printed a small paragraph of less optimistic tone which was given merely as an expression of opinion by one of two merchants.

Some of our friends at once called our attention—contrary to the advice of the comic paper Judge—to look at the doughnuts and not the hole—to the hole and entirely overlooked the doughnut. The reporter gave to the public a great, big optimistic doughnut with a very small hole. But his critics clearly saw the hole and forgot all about the fat doughnut. The reporter could hardly be blamed for not attempting to make a doughnut without a hole—it would not be possible to cook it evenly.

Some of our good advertisers and enterprising business men took prompt advantage of our column to proclaim not only the doughnut but their activity in business and their glorious optimism.

In order to get at facts our reporter took up his spider again and tried a fresh batch of doughnuts. They came out large, rich and fat, with very small holes. The case for optimism therefore has won and judging by the new and enlarged contracts The News is making with leading merchants for advertising.

Vermont Money for Vermont

Hyde Park Savings Bank Policy Approved From the Waterbury Record.

It has always been our consistent and constantly reiterated opinion that the best place in the world for Vermont investors to place their surplus cash is in the good old State of Vermont. We also held in connection with the above opinion, that it is the duty of every Vermonter who has an investment proposition, safe, sane, and following the principle of "Vermonters for Vermont," to exert every endeavor by every legitimate means within his reach to place his proposition before the citizens of Vermont.

We all, with no exceptions, like to have our expressed opinions vindicated, and it is with pleasure that we call attention to the record of the Hyde Park Savings Bank.

This is distinctly a Vermont institution, for it is their well known and commendable policy to keep Vermont money in Vermont, and they have been eminently successful. They have believed, as emphatically as we, that it was their duty to let Vermonters know of their policy, and it must be a great source of gratification to them, that Vermonters have responded to so large an extent.

We heartily congratulate this bank and its President, Ex-Gov. Carroll S. Page, upon their success, and we also take pride in the demonstrated fact, that if one wishes to reach the people of Vermont, the way to do it is through the Vermont Press.

Bilious Troubles

Bile causes no end of trouble. Sick headaches, bilious attacks, jaundice, constipation and many distressing ailments arise from an excess of bile, or from obstruction of the bile duct. Inactivity, sedentary occupations and indiscretion in feeding and drinking are bile blunders that need to be guarded against. When the liver is disordered the best bile correctives are
